Brother said that we wait at the tree burial entrance... so here it is...

After some decades, my grandchildren will still know about how life was in the good old days from these projections.

What a nice promenade walk!

What a busy city... so much noise and chaos...

Some of the epitaphs are beautiful stories of the departed...

Goodbye Dad...

Yes. Nice to return to nature.

Yes. There's quite a fresh breeze today.

Um, shall we sit down over there for a while?

Yea... It's always rainy in Ching Ming Festival... Spring shower in the grave sweeping festival...

I don't know... Maybe it's good to lie down here... together with other people.

Yes, because the ashes are deep in the soil. Nothing can be dug out. This makes the park 24-7 too.

TREE BURIAL

Cremated ashes are sent to the roots of the trees through pre-cast tubes embedded around the designated trees. Cover plates of the tubes are marked with index numbers.

SEA BURIAL

Ferries take mourners to the outskirts of Hong Kong, where the cremated ashes are scattered at designated seas.

BRIDGE OF REMEMBRANCE

Gravestones are made from transparent plates with epitaph engraved in paint. Strong overhead sunlight in Hong Kong will occasionally project the epitaph onto the ground.

Let's get some flowers for Dad. He may like this chrysanthemum...

Goodbye Dad!

You'll be missed...

So this is where father's ashes will stay.

What a nice view on the hillock!

It's a cemetery over there! Let's walk another route.

Let's walk along the promenade. Which way do you want to go, ground or up on the bridge?

Oh what a sudden rain!

Good to have a shelter here.

What do you prefer, sit under tree shade or lie down, or keep walking?

I couldn't imagine we can bring our dog to a "cemetery".

How do you find this park? I told you it doesn't look like a cemetery. See?

Yes, it's just like a park. Any park. No scary dark corners, unlike traditional columbariums...

Hey why do we make a turn here?

Yeah :) No need to jog between industrial buildings.

Hey do you know that is both a cemetery and a park?

No no... it looks purely like a park. Don't panic.

Nevermind. Let's sit down for a cup of tea or coffee.

Yes... a typical example of multi-purpose use in this tiny city!

Really?!

Not scary? um... ok, let's have a look.

Oh...

We are late. The water taxi has left!

Finally we have a continuous promenade!

Did you bring packed lunch today? Fancy a "picnic"? In the cemetery-park? Haha. Why not?

Yes, it will have flowers soon, in summer. I remember it has a symbolic meaning of HOPE...

Yes, it's deciduous. Like a cycle... Like life...

What a beautiful Frangipani!

Hope... that's poetic. Does it lose leaves in winter?
Brother said that we wait at the tree burial entrance... so here it is...
Let's get some flowers for Dad. He may like this chrysanthemum...
Yes, it will have flowers soon, in summer. I remember it has a symbolic meaning of HOPE...

What a beautiful Frangipani!

Yes, it’s deciduous. Like a cycle...

Like life...

Hope... that’s poetic. Does it lose leaves in winter?

Yes, it’s deciduous. Like a cycle...

Like life...

What a beautiful Frangipani!
Yes. Nice to return to nature. So this is where father's ashes will stay.
TREE BURIAL

Cremated ashes are sent to the roots of the trees through precast tubes embedded around the designated trees. Cover plates of the tubes are marked with index numbers.

Goodbye Dad...
I don’t know...

Maybe it’s good to lie down here... together with other people.

Yes, because the ashes are deep in the soil. Nothing can be dug out. This makes the park 24-7 too.

What do you prefer, sit under tree shade or lie down, or keep walking?

I couldn’t imagine we can bring our dog to a cemetery.

Yes, because the ashes are deep in the soil. Nothing can be dug out. This makes the park 24-7 too.

I don’t know... Maybe it’s good to lie down here... together with other people.

Yes, it’s just like a park. Any park. No scary dark corners, unlike traditional columbariums...

How do you find this park? I told you it doesn’t look like a cemetery. See?
What a busy city...
so much noise and chaos...
After some decades, my grandchildren will still know about how life was in the good old days from these projections.

Some of the epitaphs are beautiful stories of the departed...

What a nice promenade walk!
SEA BURIAL
Ferries take mourners to the outskirts of Hong Kong, where the cremated ashes are scattered at designated seas.
Goodbye Dad!
You'll be missed...
It’s a cemetery over there! Let’s walk another route.

Hey why do we make a turn here?

No no... it looks purely like a park. Don’t panic.

Hey do you know that is both a cemetery and a park?

No no... it looks purely like a park. Don’t panic.

Finally we have a continuous promenade!

Did you bring packed lunch today? Fancy a "picnic"?

Oh... We are late. The water taxi has left!

Nevermind! Let’s sit down for a cup of tea or coffee.

Yeah :) No need to jog between industrial buildings.

Yeah :) No need to jog between industrial buildings.

Hey do you know that is both a cemetery and a park?

Yes... a typical example of multi-purpose use in this tiny city!

Really?!

Not scary? um... ok, let’s have a look.

Hey why do we make a turn here?

Oh... We are late. The water taxi has left!
Um, shall we sit down over there for a while?

Let’s walk along the promenade. Which way do you want to go, ground or up on the bridge?
Oh what a sudden rain! Good to have a shelter here.

Yea... It's always rainy in Ching Ming Festival... Spring shower in the grave sweeping festival...
Yes. There's quite a fresh breeze today.

What a nice view on the hillock!